

The Position of Soviet Russia

Her position concerning the invitation of their athletes to London is as follow : She has applied for affiliation to several international sport federations, and when favourable consideration has been given to these applications she will be in the position to constitute a national olympic committee, and it is this body in each country which receives the invitation.

Recognised national olympic committees do not exist in Germany and Japan.