
On behalf of the Organising Committee for the VI Olympic Winter Games, Oslo, 1952, I have great pleasure in welcoming all members of the International Olympic Committee, as well as representatives of the various International Federations and National Olympic Committees, Press and Radio representatives, and all foreign guests and officials.

I should like to extend a special welcome to the competitors of the various teams.

It is my sincere hope that the outcome of this great festival of sport will be such that the VI Olympic Winter Games will constitute further proof that interest in the Olympic movement is not only alive but on the increase among the sporting nations of the world.

O. DITLEV-SIMONSEN, jr.
