

Severe measures taken against doping in Italia as well

Some Italian Footballers resorted to the use of toxic products in order to dope themselves. This was found out as the result of an enquiry made by the Italian National Football League. The results of the enquiry brought to light that, in certain clubs, an abusive amount of dynamogene and analeptic pharmaceutical products had been taken, which, if applied without justification, can not be considered as actual doping. The Governing body has nevertheless decided to consider as an infraction to the rule and liable to be sanctioned, the use of psychotonic amines which were used by the Italian footballers.

Let us hope that the two examples just mentioned will be followed by all the sports leaders of the world. Let us save our youths and teach them that the use of toxic products may poison them in the long run. It is the duty of all of us to do so.