

We like to express our appreciation and gratitude to the Members of the International Olympic Committee for having re-introduced Archery on the 1972 Olympic Games programme by giving in the article below a glimpse of this ancient sport and its history. Lt.-Cdr. W. F. Paterson, writer of the article, is a member of the Royal Toxophilite Society (London) and chairman of the Society of the Archer-Antiquaries formed for those interested in the history and development of the bow; it is recognised as a learned society by the British Council and has an international membership.
