

75 YEARS OF OLYMPISM

Glancing through the pages of the bulletins of the International Olympic Committee, the reader comes across quotations, anecdotes and suggestions that even today after the passage of so many years, still impress by their vigour and wisdom unaffected by the inexorable march of time and often just as apt today as when first penned. A typical example is this text written twenty years ago by the late Albert R. MAYER, member of the International Olympic Committee for Switzerland from 1946 to 1968.
