

São Tomé and Príncipe

Between November and December 1996 hundreds of children in São Tomé took part in a series of “school sport days”, a Sport for All event sponsored by the IOC. The programme included sports activities such as football and athletics and cultural events as well. Each participating school performed a traditional dance at the closing ceremony. Some of the country’s most important political and sports figures, including the president, the education minister, the minister for sport and culture and the NOC president, attended the awards ceremony.

The lucky winner receiving his prize from the president of São Tomé and Príncipe.

Lining up before the start of the race

Boys...

... and girls giving it their all.