

Lausanne, the Olympic capital

The Olympic family in Lausanne, the Olympic capital, welcomes the addition of two International sport Federations - the International Fencing Federation (FIE) and the International Archery Federation (FITA) - which have joined seven other Olympic summer sport Federations with headquarters in the city.

(Left to right) Richard Kevan Gosper and his wife, James Easton and his wife, Primo Nebiolo, Bernard Métraux, Raymond Bron, the IOC President, Françoise Zweifel, Tom Dielen, Giuseppe Cinnirella.

(Left to right) Yvette Jaggi, mayor of Lausanne and René Roch, president of the FIE.

The Lausanne train station, built in 1916, has been renovated and modernized. The inauguration was held in early April.

Visit to Lausanne of the Algerian minister of youth and sport and president of the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa.

In front of the scale model of the IOC headquarters are (left to right): Françoise Zweifel, Messaouda Azzrouz, Mouldi Aissaoui, and Mustapha Larfaoui.