The National Olympic Academy of the Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee devoted its 20th annual session to the theme of Women In the Olympic Movement. Some 150 delegates, most of them physical education teachers, students, coaches and young sports officials, took part from 25 to 28 November in a week of activities that included presentations and debate sessions on the advancement of women in world sports structures and especially in the Asian sports movement. The IOC was represented by Katia Mascagni Stivachtis, head of the women's advancement section, who gave a presentation on the various initiatives taken by the IOC to give greater opportunities to women athletes, coaches, officials, sports leaders and journalists within the Olympic Movement.
