

Ranked among the leading historical journals in a survey reported by the American Historical Association, the

JOURNAL OF SPORT HISTORY

illuminates the critical issues and themes of sport history through the publication of interpretive essays and historical research which advance the understanding of sport and its impact on society.

The JOURNAL is published three times each year. A sampling of topics which have appeared in recent issues include:

- Business and Amateur Baseball
- Jackie Robinson and the American Mind
- Joe Louis and Race Relations
- Cricket in 19th-Century America
- Critical Review of Canadian Sport History
- Hispanic Influence on the Rodeo
- English Sport Spectators
- Nero's Involvement in Athletics
- Exclusion of Women at the Ancient Olympics

The JOURNAL features book reviews and surveys of the current literature on the history of sport from more than 100 historical journals.
