

Edited by S. E. SANGSTER ("Canuck")

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Attention is called to the BASEBALL MAGAZINE'S Canadian Outing Information Bureau, which co-operates with this department and is under the personal supervision of "Canuck." A page notice of this bureau appears in our advertising section and attention is called to the facts stated therein. Only a nominal charge of $1.00 is asked of inquirers. If any information is required, bearing on any trip in Canada or Newfoundland, write this bureau, care of the editor, Ottawa, Canada.

The Religion of Out-of-Doors: Too many of us have surrendered our rightful heritage of outdoor life and all that accompanies such for the pottage of civilization; and it is with the desire of lessening this tendency and inducing our readers to appreciate the God-given boon of our rivers and lakes, our woods and other "Silent Places," and as a result to get out in the open—to camp—and thus let nature assist in keeping healthy the body and clean and wholesome the mind, that this department has been instituted in the BASEBALL MAGAZINE. Every red-blooded American has the germ of wanderlust and desire for the clean open places implanted in him, and it is our desire to persuade the mind to take him forth into these places, and let him there learn for himself the life he has missed so long. Now comes that all-too-brief period of the year when camping parties venture forth in thousands, pitching their canvas home near some stream or lake—for there needs must be sufficient excuse for turning one's back on daily duties and cares, and "going camping" answers perhaps as well as any just now. Outdoor life is sufficiently desirable to require no excuse—all thinking men endorse it on common-sense grounds. So let us take you out in the open—acquire this Religion of Outdoors.

* * *

The Canadian Information Bureau: Mention has been made of this bureau in the editor's note above, but a few words editorially may not come amiss to our readers. This bureau in an institution that should prove valuable to this magazine's readers in many ways. CANADA possesses the grandest outdoor districts in the world. Its virgin Northland covers many thousands of square miles, a network of silver threads—hundreds of lakes and rivers linked together, the woods filled with the live things of the wilds. Nowhere in the world may be had such ideal canoeing cruises — its big game, its game fish and its outing trips are par excellence on the Continent. The bureau is possessed of up-to-the-minute data and information covering any and every class of outing in any of the nine Provinces of CANADA. If a big game trip, guides and territories can be had from us that are guaranteed reliable—and it is worth while to possess such information—merely a nominal fee of $1.00 is asked from inquirers, simply to help in part to cover the cost of maintaining the sources of reliable information. It pays to know definitely about any outing territory, about the guides you will have in charge of your big game trip, about accommodations at hotels, sources of provisioning on canoe trips, etc. We urge you to go to CANADA for your vacation this year, to plan such outing now, and to lose no time in writing to this bureau, stating just what kind of outing wished, time available and vacation month, and all other information you can supply when writing.