

LA84

---

Foundation

George Stallings

George Stallings, who brought the Highlanders out of the slough of despond, and is trying a like feat with the Boston Nationals, never believes in gentleness. He is a taskmaster pure and simple. On the bench he is a czar. His word is law and he must have his own way. Stallings believes that he can attain the best results by scoring players unmercifully when they do not obey orders. He admits that he terrorizes men who err and who fail to listen to instructions. A great rooter himself, he thinks that a team should be fighting all the time, for energy and pugnacity in his opinion are indispensable. Off the field, however, Stallings is quiet, affable and good natured. He has been accused of a tendency to play favorites, but that is due to unbridled enthusiasm over the work of this or that player.