magazine upon receiving a request to do so.

We are pleased to state that the catalogue is very finely illustrated in colors, and shows clearly just how the glove will look when you get it through the mail if you care to order that way. Of course, most every reliable sporting goods dealer all over the country handles the well-known Draper-Maynard baseball gloves, balls, masks, mitts, etc. The catalogue, however, will give an excellent description of all kinds of baseball paraphernalia, and is well worth having. No other baseball goods are more durable and better made than the D. & M. brand. If the dealer in your neighborhood carries the Draper-Maynard brand, you can make no better move than to buy their goods if you are looking for a successful season on the "diamond" this coming Spring.

TRADE NOTE

The new 1915 Spring and Summer catalogue, issued by P. Goldsmith & Sons of Cincinnati, is just out. This catalogue is the finest ever issued by these well-known baseball manufacturers. It's free on request.

The Official League Goldsmith Ball—guaranteed for 18 innings—is known around the world. Not only is it an official league ball, but moreover, it is as good as any ball made in this country. It is adopted as the official ball by professional leagues playing under national agreement rules.

The Goldsmith Co., of Cincinnati, recently received some very complimentary letters from the following ball players, who are playing on the All National League Club, now touring the West. The following players speak very highly of the finger gloves that came to them done up in their uniforms. According to the P. Goldsmith Co., the following players express their high appreciation of Goldsmith goods:

Fred Snodgrass, Max Carey, Jack Miller, Robert Byrne, Cosy Dolan, Bill Killifer, G. C. Alexander, Tesreau, Tom Clark, Arthur Fletcher, John Vaughn, Geo. Burns.
