

Sideline Chatter

"In my humble opinion, I think Georgia Tech of 1917 was one of the super teams in football history, only one problem concerning the team, most people are unaware how good they were. In my opinion, that backfield was far superior to the Four Horsemen. The Notre Dame backfield had a lot of New York media push."

"I did not know that Georgia Tech at one time was known as the Golden Tornado ... Would like to see more of My Football Notebook."

"I am working on a college football research project which is concerned with national champions. Any information that members could provide concerning the following rating systems would be greatly appreciated: William F. Board, often called AZZI RATEM, for the years of 1942 to circa 1960; Edward Litkenhous, often called Litratings, for the years 1973-84; Earl R. Jessen Ratings, from early 40's to 1974."

"I'm wondering if any member has an old program or other reference work that would help me find the first names and schools of the men who played in the 1918 Rose Bowl game between Mare Island and Camp Lewis, and also the 1919 game between Mare Island and Great Lakes. I can provide the last names of the players on each squad."
