

Grid historians visit College Hall of Fame

Six dedicated gridiron fans, three from the east and three from the midwest, gathered at the College Football Hall of Fame last July for the first “official” meeting of members of the College Football Historical Society and College Football Researchers Association. Hall of Fame curator Pat Harmon, former president of the Football Writers Association of America, was a gracious host and opened the Hall’s library and files for research by the visitors.

CFHS plans to hold a mini-convention this summer in the Chicago area.
