FOR SALE: Shaping College Football: Transformation of an American Sport, 1919-1930 by Ray Schmidt from Syracuse University Press. This is a look at the factors that converted college football from a campus-based sport controlled by the old-line Eastern schools, into a truly nationalized sport that included all the trappings of big-time football taken for granted today. Topics covered include the evolution of parity on the field, rise of the intersectional games, stadium building, and styles of play on the field. It can be ordered from Syracuse University Press on their website OR by phone at 1-800-365-8929, AND it is also available on Amazon.com.

"In reference to the article about the erroneous claims that former President Gerald Ford had been an All-American at Michigan, it should be remembered that he WAS good enough of a linemen in the 1930s to get his picture in the annual Illustrated Football Annual magazine of the time. Gerald Ford DID make the 'All-American Integrity Team'."

"The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, a famous orator and abolitionist, the brother of Harriet Beecher Stowe, and the subject of a Pulitzer Prize-winning biography last year, came from a Yale family although he graduated from Amherst in 1834. Yale's football captain in 1887 was named Henry W. Beecher, and one source claims that he must have been the preacher's grandson."
