

Advance Southern Suggestions

Milan, Leghorn and Panama hats will be popular at the Southern resorts, worn in conservative shapes with quiet hat bands. Above a Milan from Knox.

Tripler appears to have secured an Ideal fabric for this "Curzon Model" polo coat—it is woven from the fine silky undercoat of the Kashmir Goat (Habitat India) and is unequalled for softness and warmth. It also has a thermostatic quality—cool at Palm Beach and warm in Alaska—altogether no better coat can be had for Southern wear.

Knox are showing a great variety of hats in both coarse and fine straw. This one is called a "Punta straw," the top part of the Italian grass only being used in its manufacture.

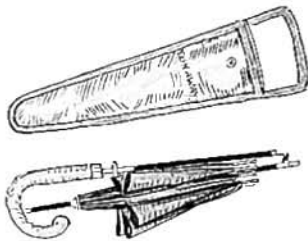

Very smart indeed is this double breasted blue dinner Jacket featuring a faint herringbone in unfinished dress worsted (tropical weight). The fact that the Prince of Wales possesses a similar garment will probably not prevent New Yorkers from taking kindly to it. F. R. Tripler & Co.

Tripler suggests to us that as dinner clothes are now "de rigueur" at resort hotels and at sea, an extra dinner jacket in a different model helps to break up the monotony of a man's appearance, so here we show a good looking single breasted garment in tropical worsted.

The practical, cool, and comfortable gabardine coat will again be a favorite this coming season. Tripler recommends it in a reddish brown to be worn with white trousers and cocoa brown buckskin shoes.

Rogers Poet enter this page with a note of warning. Weather promised by resort booklets does not always materialize, so take along this convenient folding umbrella.

Knox has combined the Basque beret and the American cap with this result—it answers to the name of "Bercap." The small circular holes on the concealed visor show that it is air cooled.
