

SUPPLY AND DEMAND

Among the many ISOH members (more than 220 of them), we have quite a few leading and internationally known Olympic collectors. Whether they collect books, stamps or other Olympic memorabilia, each one of them is always on the look-out for that one missing item in his or her collection.

The editor-team is of the opinion that it would be worthwhile to give all these serious collectors an opportunity to try to obtain that one object that they have been looking for for such a long time.

Thus, in the form of a new section in the Journal of Olympic History, called "Supply and Demand," we will now provide our readers space for placing short advertisements in which they may offer or ask for any specific Olympic item. This advertisement is, contrary to any other publications, not "free of charge." Instead, it will cost the advertiser US$10/£7 per issue and per advertisement.

The size of each advertisement will be about one-sixth of a page. Should any one member request more "space" for his or her ad, the price will rise accordingly. It could well
