

ATHLETICS.

SOME INTERNATIONAL ATHLETIC COMPARISONS.

THE simultaneous athletic contests between the various prominent schools of New York at Berkeley Oval, on April 23d, and the similar events at the meet. in of the London Athletic Club (England), held the same day, at which the majority of the events were confined to members of the public schools, come opportunely for various comparisons. In some respects the events in each country differ, but in a sufficient number of them the conditions are so similar that the results afford a rough estimate of the capacity of the youth of the two countries.

For instance, the 100 yards at Berkeley Oval was made from the 8-yard mark in 10s; at the L. A. C. the public school championship time was 10 3-5s. The high jump here was 5 ft. 4 1/2 in.; at L. A. C. 5 ft. 4 1/4 in. The 880 yards was won from the 40-yard mark at Berkeley in 2m. 2 2-5s.; at L. A. C., 2m. 4 4-5s. In the 120-yard hurdle race here the time was 17s.; in England it took 17 2-5s. to cover the distance. In the 440-yard race the New York boy's time was 54s.; at the L. A. C. the same race was timed at 52 2-5s. The broad jump here was 18 ft. 10 3/4 in.; in England, 19 ft. 8 1/4 in. The 1-mile run here was covered in 4m. 45 2-5s.; at the L. A. C. the time was 4m. 33 4-5s. The English events did not include shot putting, pole vault, hammer throwing or mile walk, as here, but a three-quarter mile steeplechase was in the programme.

ARTHUR INKERSLEY.

GOLF.

ATTOURNAMENT at Lakewood, several practice matches between the college teams and neighboring golf clubs, and finally the intercollegiate team and individual matches at Ardsley, have filled up the time of the golfers since our last chronicle in these columns.

Seventy players started in the tournament at Lakewood. The day was pleasant, the green in fair condition, and, now that we have had some experience in such matters, the machinery at these tournaments runs very smoothly. The man who does a hole in one, and the man who puts standing on his head, were both present at Lakewood, so that the success of the tournament may be said to have been complete. The man who does holes in one did only one hole in that figure, and the man who puts standing on his head took 117 strokes for the round, so that neither was in good form. Strange as it may seem to the ingenious minds of the freak putters, there is little chance that any merely mechanical discovery will be made to insure accurate putting. The royal road to good putting lies over just as stiff country as the royal road to learning. Good nerves, much practice, confidence and a good eye make a good putter, while the various methods of the contortionist never result in much more than temporary and accidental success. As a distinguished contemporary poet has written:

He who lives more lives than one,
More deaths than one must die, so also we venture to affirm that he who practices many and fantastic ways of putting will gain the questionable privilege of missing the hole in more ways than one.

We notice that the habit of making medal-play scores out of match-play scores still continues, and still continues to be ridiculous. A good example of this was seen during the intercollegiate matches at Ardsley, where in several of the matches the contestants made phenomenal scores, while, when it came down to the actual test of the medal round, only one man out of the whole lot handed in a card under ninety. These approximate scores may tickle the vanity of this one or that one, or they may serve to make defeat seem less bitter, but they are misleading as scores and utterly useless as a guide to any one who is studying the form of the players or the difficulties of the different links. Probably this will continue to be done, since human vanity is insatiable and facts are more often unwelcome than welcome. Of the seventy players, Mr. W. J. Travis handed in the best score for the preliminary round, a very creditable 81, with one 7 and three 6's, and with fourteen of the eighteen holes in 5 or under. That comes very near being high-class golf, and Mr. Travis has our best wishes for many more such rounds in the months to come.

The eight men who handed in scores under ninety included Messrs. Toler, Tyng, Harriman, Fairbanks (a new man from Scotland), Robbins, Richardson, and Bohlen. There was the usual number of good men, such as Messrs. Lynch, Riddle, Bayard, and Park, who did not get into the first sixteen, and also a rather unusual number of gentlemen out for a walk and a little exercise who blithely handed in scores up to 126. We write of these latter in no flippant tone. Again we say it, they are the backbone of sport, whether it be golf or anything else, and long may they continue to take part in tournaments
