

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

PAUL R. BARTROP is a Lecturer in Politics at Gippsland Institute of Advanced Education, Churchill, Victoria. He has previously taught at Deakin and Monash Universities, and is nearing completion of a doctoral dissertation at Monash on the Australian Government's policy towards refugees from Nazism between 1933-39. His publications include Scores, Crowds and Records: Statistics on VFL Football Since 1945, and he has given papers on the history of the VFL and the VFA at several Sporting Traditions Conferences.

OWEN COVICK is a Senior Lecturer in Economics at the Flinders University of South Australia. His principal research interest is the economics of labour markets. From 1975 to 1983 he was player-manager of the highly "professional" Flinders University soccer side, "F.U. Academicals" Since 1984 he has merely been a committed supporter of the team.

CLIVE FORSTER is a Senior Lecturer in Geography at the Flinders University of South Australia. He is author of Adelaide...A Social Atlas and is the South Australian editor of Urban Policy and Research. He has played club cricket in England and Australia, and continues to participate enthusiastically in the lower reaches of Adelaide District cricket.

EDWIN JAGGARD is Head of Department, Social Sciences, at the Western Australian College of Advanced Education. As well as his interest in nineteenth century British electoral politics, he has enjoyed a life-long involvement with the surf lifesaving movement.

JOHN O'HARA teaches history at the Tasmanian State Institute of Technology. He is an executive member of the Australian Society for Sports History and of the National Association for Gambling Studies. His book A Mug's Game: A History of Australian Gambling is to be published by the University of New South Wales Press.
