

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

RICHARD CASHMAN is Senior Lecturer in History at the University of N.S.W. He has published on various aspects of sports history including the history of Indian cricket and Australian cricket crowds.

JOHN HATCH is Senior Lecturer in Economics at the University of Adelaide. He has an eclectic interest in sport.

IAN JOBLING is Senior Lecturer and Head of Human Movement Studies at the University of Queensland. His main teaching and research interests are in the socio-historical aspects of Australian sport.

DAVID LANE graduated with a Bachelor of Human Movement Studies from the University of Queensland, specialising in the socio-historical aspects.

JOHN McDONALD is Reader in Economics at Flinders University.

ROBERT PADDICK is Senior Lecturer in Education at Flinders University. He has published on the philosophy of sport and leisure and is currently interested in the area of rules and ethics in games.

DAVID ROWE is Lecturer in Media and Cultural Studies at Newcastle College of Advanced Education. His research interests are in the sociology of popular culture and media, particularly popular music and sport. He is the editor (with Geoffrey Lawrence) of Power Play: Essays in the Sociology of Australian Sport.

MARTIN SHARP is a senior research officer with the Historical Research Section, Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade. With W.J. Hudson, he is author of Australian Independence: Colony to Reluctant Kingdom, to be published in early 1988. His two most cherished aims are to see the Swans win another premiership flag and Yorkshire another county championship.

IAN TYRELL is Senior Lecturer in history at the University of N.S.W. and has written books on the American temperance movement, and on modern American historiography. He has also enjoyed the sound of bat on ball at Wrigley Field, Chicago and Fenway Park, Boston.