

EDITORIAL PREFACE

This is my last issue as editor. I would like to thank subscribers, contributors and reviewers for their support during the past five years and hope that this will continue for my successor. Together we can be proud of the development of Sporting Traditions and the Australian Society for Sports History.

I would also like to apologise to readers for a misordering of pages in the last issue and a few distribution problems which have occurred. Partly this has been a function of working at a distance from the printers and distributors. The new editor intends to review the position and such incidents should be a matter of history.
