

Notes on Contributors

NORMAN BAKER is an Associate Professor in the History Department of the State University of New York at Buffalo. Originally a specialist in eighteenth century British history, he has recently published a number of articles on post-World War II British sports and the London Olympics of 1948. A book on this topic is planned.

ED JAGGARD is an Associate Professor of History and Head of the School of Social and Cultural Studies at Edith Cowan University. He has published a number of books and articles on aspects of the history of cricket and surf lifesaving.

BRYAN JAMISON is a doctoral candidate in the Department of History at the University of Queensland. His dissertation subject is 'The Politics of Pleasure in late-colonial and early post-colonial Queensland'. He has published in the field of community history and is co-authoring a book on Australian Federation.

GEOFFREY LAWRENCE is Professor of Sociology and Head of the Department of Social Sciences at Central Queensland University. His most recent books are Agriculture, Environment and Society (with Frank Vanclay and Brian Furze) (Melbourne, Macmillan, 1992) and The Environmental Imperative (with Frank Vanclay) (Rockhampton, Central Queensland University Press, 1995).

DAVID ROWE is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Leisure and Tourism Studies, University of Newcastle, New South Wales. His most recent books are Contemporary Australian Television (with Stuart Cunningham and Toby Miller) (Sydney, University of New South Wales Press, 1994) and Popular Cultures: Rock Music, Sport and the Politics of Pleasure (London, Sage, 1995).

RODNEY SULLIVAN is an Associate Professor in the Department of History and Politics at James Cook University at Townsville, North Queensland. He has published on Queensland labour history and Australian-Philippine interactions. He is author of Exemplar of Americanism: the Philippine Career of Dean C Worcester (The University of Michigan Center for South and Southeast Asian Studies, Ann Arbor; New Day Publishers, Quezon City).

ROBIN SULLIVAN a former secondary school history teacher and high school principal, is currently Deputy Director-General (Curriculum) in the Queensland Education Department.